Trip Difficulty: Challenging

Singu Chuli Peak (6,501m) also recognized as Fluted Peak to be found in the hub of Annapurna Himalayan Range surrounded by the Annapurna Sanctuary is an eye-catching peak to trek. Singu Chuli, in fact, is an extraordinary that bestows sublime views from Annapurna base camp than its tallness holds. The south edge route is more popular route. This trek is recommended for those adventure lovers who are seeking for outstanding mountain views. You will take pleasure from the great enriching assortment in Ghandurk, Ghorepani and more during Singu Chuli Climbing. You can enjoy the immense vistas of the world's tallest mountains like Annapurna I, III and other snowy peaks.

Wilfred Noyce was the first man to ascend this peak with David Cox. This mountain is located in the Annapurna Sanctuary connected to Tharpu Chuli and diagonally to the Himchuli peak. We get there at the Base camp of Singu Chuli as we traverse the Modi river gorge to the Annapurna Base camp (4350m) and then set up two higher camps further up before reaching the summit of the Singu Chuli Peak. It is a significant day where you can enjoy the sights of Mount Hiunchuli (6441m.), Annapurna I (8091m.), Annapurna South (7229m.), Annapurna III (7555m.), Machhapuchhre also known as Fish Tail (6997m.), Gangapurna (7454m.) and several other peak views. The first high camp is installed at an altitude of 4900m going close to of North East face and another higher one at 5500m which lies on the North East facade of the peak. Straight up walls next to the high point pose some technical risk on this climb. This ascend is suggested to those climbers who have some prior ice climbing experience.

This 24-days Singu Chuli climbing takes you to the maximum altitude of 6, 501m. Tentatively, you will walk 6 to 7 hours per day. For accommodation, you may either stay in lodge or set a camp. All in all, Singu Chuli Expedition will take you passing amazing backdrop and allow you to get the vision of distinctive culture. Plus, breathtaking views of Lamjung ranges, Mt. Machhapuchhre, Annapurna ranges, terrace fields etc are the attractive part of the trek.
